Preparing Your Pet for Back-To-School Season

Well it's officially back-to-school season, when textbooks replace beach days and barbecues. If you notice changes in your pet, chewing on items that smell like their companion or going to the bathroom in inappropriate places, they may have a case of the back-to-school blues.

Exercise with your dog before you leave: You should play or exercise with your dog before heading off to school. A tired dog is less likely to experience stress when you leave.

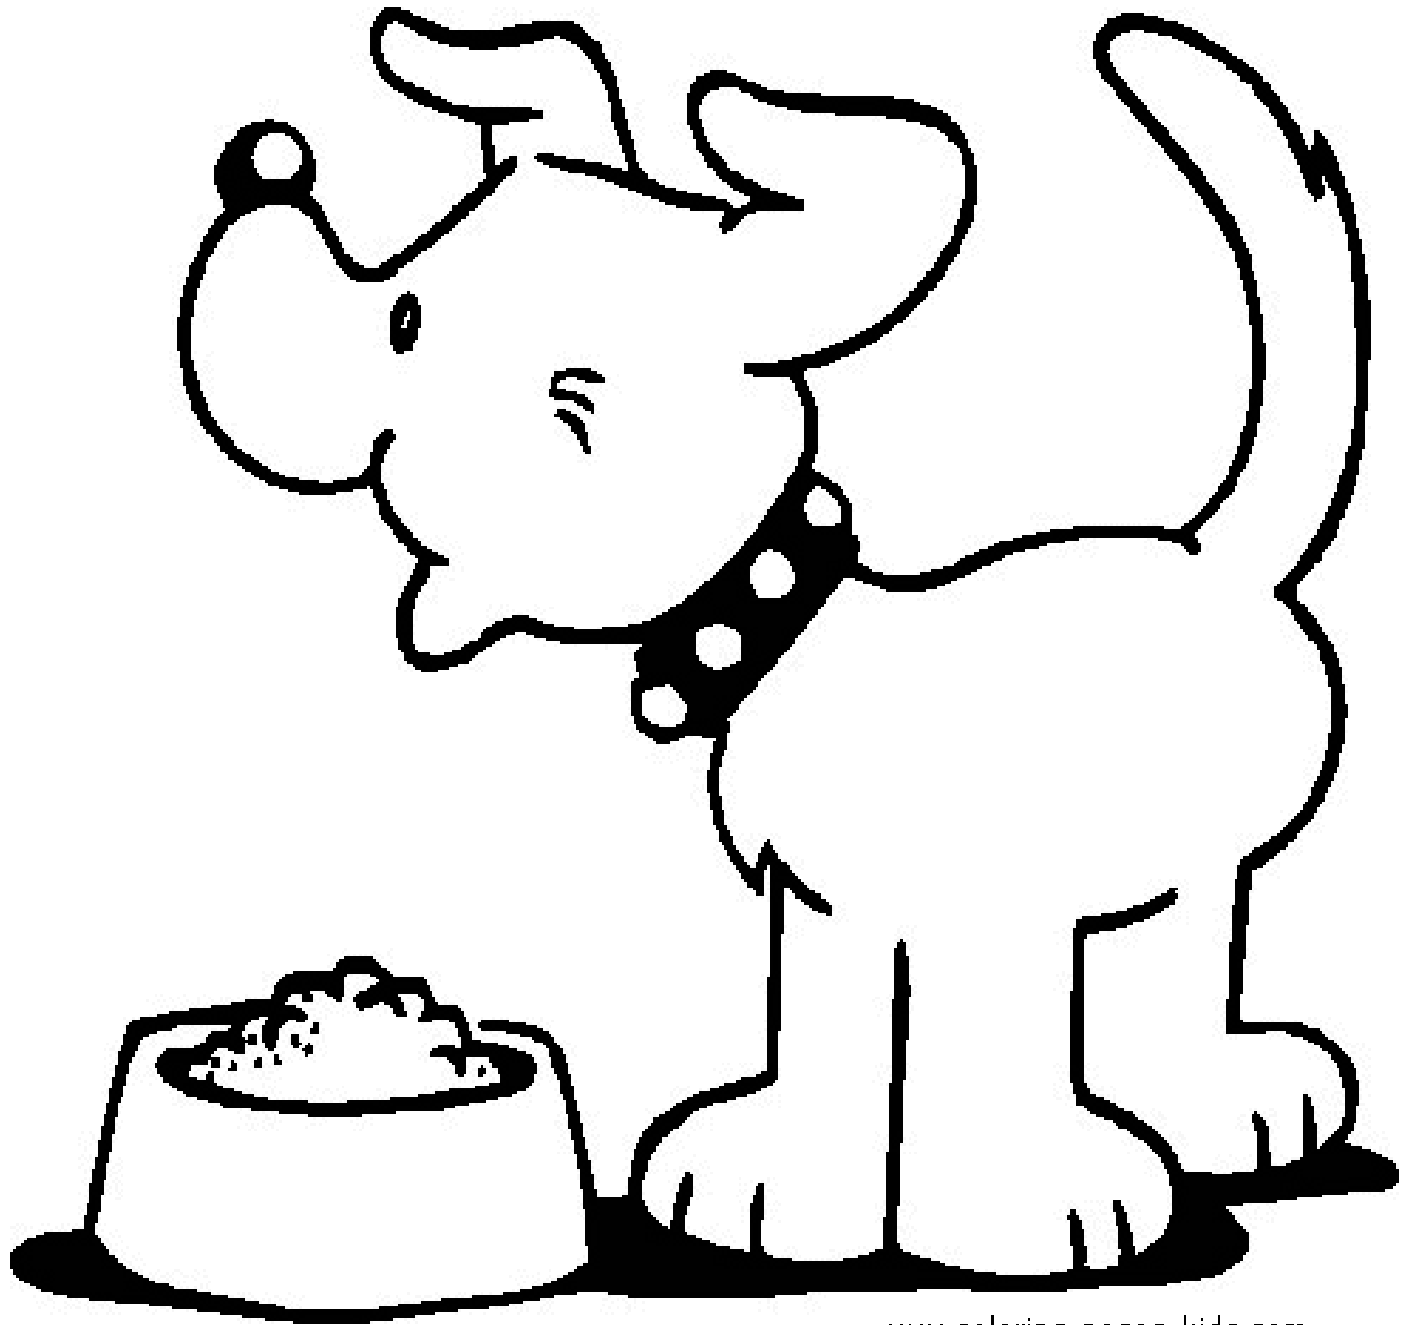

Promote independence: Don't make a big deal about leaving, and only leave him alone for short periods of time at first. When you come home, simply greet him and return to your routine.
