When I Grow Up I Want To Be an Animal Police Officer

Animal cops have the same powers as a regular police officer: Just like police officers who protect people, animal cops carry badges, wear uniforms, investigate crime scenes, collect evidence and make arrests.

Animal cops carry special tools: Some tools they carry are guns, pepper spray and clubs. These tools are used to make sure the animal cop is safe against any kind of danger.

The most important tool an Animal cop has is a camera! Animal cops take lots of photos of abused and neglected animals. They can use these photographs as evidence in court to help get the abuser arrested. Pictures are worth a thousand words for the animals!

Animal cops are smart! Some animal cops went to college and studied criminal justice or animal sciences. Other animal cops went to the police academy! Many animal cops also volunteered or worked at veterinary hospitals and animal shelters.

Animal cops love all animals! Besides cats and dogs, animal cops rescue horses, chickens, sheep, goats, rabbits, reptiles, birds and rodents.

Animal cops work on the street and in the office: The officers spend a lot of their time outside doing investigations, but they all have a desk in an office where they write up their cases and make phone calls.

Animal cops need your help! If you see someone hurting an animal, it's important to get help fast. Don't try to help the animal yourself. Instead, the best thing to do is to tell an adult you trust. Together, you and the adult can call the police or your local animal shelter.
